FOOD TOUR THROUGH THE HEART OF LISBON FLAVORS THAT TELL STORIES

A Journey Where Every Bite Reveals a Story

Get ready for a sensory journey through Lisbon's historic center, where every corner holds a memory and every flavor reveals centuries of tradition. Over the course of four hours, we invite you to dive into the soul of Portuguese gastronomy through century-old shops and beloved local institutions that preserve the true essence of our culture.

Inside a Historic House of Portuguese Flavors

Pick-up at the hotel or meeting point.

Our first stop is a landmark deli from the 1800s and the perfect place to understand the deep connection between Portugal and its most iconic ingredient: salted cod. Surrounded by shelves that feel frozen in time, we uncover the stories of the old Portas de Santo Antão, the cod-fishing routes, and the role of bacalhau in the everyday life of the Portuguese. Here, we open the tasting experience with a selection of traditional cured meats paired with a glass of Port wine.

Lisbon's Beloved Clams and the Culture of the Sea

We continue to a historic restaurant founded in 1848 (we keep the name a surprise to preserve the charm of discovery). At the table, we taste ameijoas à Bulhão Pato, a quintessential Lisbon dish. It's the perfect setting to explore Portugal's long and intimate relationship with shellfish — where they are harvested, why they are so present in our culinary heritage, and how they helped shape social and family traditions.

Portugal's Iconic Canning Heritage

Next, we visit a traditional Portuguese tinned-goods shop, a colorful tribute to the country's century-old canning industry. Here, we introduce the cultural and economic importance of preserved seafood, while tasting a delicious trio of tender baby cuttlefish, roasted peppers, and crisp, refreshing Vinho Verde.

The Soul of Lisbon's Tascos

From there, we dive into the world of tascos, the humble and lively eateries where daily life unfolds at the counter. We stop at a beloved spot known for the line that forms outside, all to taste what may be Portugal's most iconic street food: the bifana and the prego. These simple yet delicious sandwiches are flavors of celebration, conviviality, and the relaxed spirit of Lisbon's locals.

The Secrets of Conventual Sweets

We then visit a traditional pastry shop, where we explore the enchanting universe of conventual sweets. Here, we explain the origins of these centuries-old recipes — born in monasteries, crafted with an abundance of egg yolks and sugar, and preserved through generations by nuns who guarded their secrets with devotion.

A Farewell Toast to Portugal's Authentic Flavors

We end our tour in a quintessentially Portuguese specialty shop, tucked away from the main tourist routes, the perfect setting for a final tasting of artisanal cheeses, red wine, Moscatel, and olive oil. It's the ideal conclusion: an authentic, heartfelt celebration of Portugal's most cherished flavors.

At the end of the tour, we take you back to the hotel.
